

La' Shawndra_Video

0:03

Hi everyone.

0:05

My name is Dr. La' Shawndra Scroggins and I am the 21st Century Community Learning Centers Group Leader at the U.S. Department of Education.

0:14

I am delighted to welcome you to the Nita M. Lowey 21st CCLC National Technical Assistance Center.

0:22

If you lead or work in a 21st CCLC program at the State or local level, this new center is the premier place for you.

0:32

It's the result of thoughtful reflection on expansive data collected directly from the field.

0:39

We listened to your needs, your stories, and your data.

0:44

That led us to create a center that can provide the depth and breadth of content and technical assistance you need and deserve to support the valuable work you do.

0:54

Here you'll find opportunities to learn with and from each other and from experts in the field.

1:00

You'll have access to technical assistance that fits your needs and your schedule, ranging from intensive to targeted to universal services delivered through a multitiered system of supports.

1:13

Whether you've worked in 21st CCLC programming for a day or a decade, you'll find practical capacity-building tools, resources, and professional development infused with evidence-based strategies and best practices.

1:30

We'll be announcing new opportunities and resources throughout this year, so I encourage you to connect with us at 21stcclcntac.org and follow us on social media to stay informed.

1:44

Programs like yours can have a positive, lasting influence on students and families, and I am ecstatic to introduce you to a new generation of learning, community, and support.